

A robotics lab is a dedicated, specialized space designed for the design, construction, programming, and testing of robots and automated systems. It functions as a hands-on, interdisciplinary environment where theoretical concepts from science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) are applied to create functional, real-world robotic applications.